XRDS document from an X.509 (both as described in RFC 3280, subsection 8.3.1.1 of section 8.3). The syntax definition of the PDV is the same, only the XML namespace information is different. The PDV element is used in signed data and in unsigned data. Signed data uses a different (optional) element to identify the subject of the key that is being signed. The value of the element identifies the XRDS document that is to be used. The element is added by the Cryptographic Service Provider to resolve the XML namespace used by the X.509 certificate. The result of a request is one of the following: 0x80 (30) - Success 0x00 (0) - Bad response
